Do as I say not as I do!

I love love love the game. I am not the most studied, I have many leaks and am continually learning & improving my game. I have however, a lot of experience. been playing live for nearly a decade. (do not ask me my age) my hobbies: backgammon, hanging out with my dog (solver approved, she is my world <3, see next slide), & punting.

milly

Head of Emotional Support for Poker@Berkeley (usually posted at the bust out desk during tournaments)

fun fact #1: since meeting david & jones, milly has developed a screen addiction. maysa now enforces a strict screen time limit for milly at home. it is not going very well.

fun fact #2: since meeting david & jones, milly is now medically classified as overweight by her vet. as such, maysa has put her on a diet and exercise plan. also not going very well.

plays 5/10+ only. 10,000+ lifetime hands, primarily live, some ipad volume. deep stack specialist (former texan)

What to take away:

We're not pros:

- We have a good understanding of the game and study it frequently
- If we knew everything, we would(n't) drop out to play poker
- We hope to give a very fundamental understanding of the basics of poker strategy
- Because we are experienced players, we will mention terms that you will not understand. Please, interrupt us if a vocabulary comes out that is in any way unclear.

At the end of the course, you'll:

- Be able to crush your home game with high school friends
- Hopefully understand poker on a deeper level as a good basis to expand on, as you'll soon find out poker is extremely complex!
